This session will look at the management of illness cases focusing on a holistic approach and doing the right thing! Identifying abilities rather than disabilities is the new best practice and is a more positive approach to assisting employees re-entering the workplace. Jane will describe how this new approach has worked at the Alberta School Employee Benefit Plan (ASEBP) and the positive outcomes that have been realized. She will also talk about how the wellness of the case manager and the case management team has been an integral part of successfully working with clients at ASEBP. Join us as Jane and Lynn share their experience and find out how their approach may have a positive impact on managing your disability cases.

Speakers

Jane Standing – has been in the business of helping people for most of her career. Eighteen of those years were in the delivery of disability management services. Jane has a Bachelor of Social Work Degree and is currently the Manager of Coordinated Claims Management at the Alberta School Employee Benefit Plan. Jane was a supervisor at WCB in the Education Industry for a number of years; chair of the city of Edmonton's Transit Board for 5 years and some may recognize Jane from running for city council.

Lynn Norris – has over 25 years experience in Nursing and Disability Management. She is certified in Occupational Health & Safety. Lynn has worked as a Health Care Consultant managing many projects in Alberta, Ontario and Quebec. Her expertise includes integrated disability management models, working closely with Employee and Family Assistance Program providers.
